

Myelin compresses a year of running a startup into 30 minutes of consequential choices. No videos. No quizzes. Just judgment.

instead use this in hero section

The world's most immersive way to learn how to think.

Myelin puts you inside real-world situations where there are no right answers, no instructions, and no room for passive learning. You make decisions, face consequences, and develop the judgment to navigate complexity.

Learn by doing. Think by deciding.

This gives you the database you want while keeping the first-time signup friction low.

And importantly, I'd make College/University a searchable standardized field, not free text. That lets you later answer things like:

“We have 2,840 students from 47 institutions using Myelin.”

rather than ending up with separate records for IIT Hyderabad, IITH, IIT-H, etc.

simulations first one

Run a seed-stage SaaS for 24 simulated months. Pressure: cash, crisis, co-founder, competitor.

We are running it for only 4 quarters
